

Grade 10 Guide to English

Term 1: Modules A and B

Module A: Fitting in …

This year I will:

✔ do twenty thousand extra mural activities

✔ deliver the best speech ever

✔ read many books, including my set works

✔ rock my English teacher's world

✔ do all my homework

✔ be a delightful child.

1. Novel: A Thousand Spendid Suns

By the end of this section you must, at least, have completed the activities on Parts I and II of the novel.

Look at the cover of your book and answer the following questions.

1.1 Describe the picture on the cover.

1.2 Describe the font used on the cover.

1.3 Based on the above descriptions and a consideration of the novel's title, what impression is given about what the book will be about?

Now turn to your study guide and read the Introduction and Historical Overview of Afghanistan. You will discuss these in class and then go on to do the "Before Reading" activities.

Anagram break: Which famous poet is hiding in this phrase? I am a weakish speller

2. Prepared speech

Why? Apparently because it is a life skill – like mathematics, you will believe this when you see it – which you will ☺. Well, you might be famous – or even successful at what you do gasp!

Topic: A choice of the following:

1. "It was a pleasure to burn." (Ray Bradbury, Farenheit 451)
2. The past is a foreign country: they do things differently there." (L.P. Hartley, The Go-Betweens)
3. "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." (Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities."

How to write a speech

Prepare, prepare, prepare!

A strong speech has a strong structure:

1. A clear introduction:

i. establishes a relationship with your audience and motivates them to listen to you – begin with an "attention grabber", like a quote or a thought-provoking/ funny anecdote; do NOT act out a scene: this is not a dramatic monologue, but a formal speech.
ii. presents the topic briefly and memorably – explain what the topic means and the general direction your speech is going to take.
iii. makes a confident first impression.

2. A strong body:

i. consists of three to five points that are effectively organised so that each point flows smoothly into the next to make a convincing whole.
ii. shows that you have done your research – it includes interesting or thought-provoking facts.
iii. shows that you have thought deeply about your research and made certain conclusions about it.
iv. shows sincerity – you may share a personal experience or viewpoint.

3. A powerful conclusion:

i. ties up the points you made in your speech.
ii. refers back to the introduction.
iii. reinforces the message you want to convey with your speech.
iv. leaves your audience with food for thought/ laughter.

4. Good language:

Your register is formal.

i. Your vocabulary is, if not sophisticated, well thought out and used correctly.

How to present a speech

Prepare, prepare, prepare!

1. Confidence:

i. You sound like you know what you are talking about.
ii. You sound like you are convinced of the message you are conveying to your audience.
iii. You stand confidently and do not make distracting movements with your hands or body.

2. Eye contact:

i. You know your speech so well that you only have to glance at your key cards occasionally to remind you of the next point you want to make.
ii. You look meaningfully at members of the audience so that you look sincere and your audience members feel like you are really talking to them.

3. Volume:

i. You speak at a volume that is comfortable for the whole class to hear you.
ii. You vary the volume of your voice to support meaning – if you are making an especially important point you may lower your voice or make it louder, while still being audible and without shouting.

4. Pace:

i. You speak slowly and clearly – remember that your audience is hearing your speech for the first time; they need time to hear and think about what you are saying.
ii. When you are making an especially important point – PAUSE. Your audience will know that it is important and they will be able to think about it.
iii. You know your speech so it is fluent.

5. Tone:

i. You do not speak at a constant drone, neither do you speak in a sing-song tone: you sound like you feel and mean what you are saying.
ii. You speak to your audience rather than at them.

Anagram break: Which famous actor is hiding in this phrase?

'Docile or paranoid'

Anagram break: Which famous actor is hiding in this phrase?

'Cunning at math'

3. Reading for comprehension

 A comprehension test assesses your ability to understand what someone else has written, as well as your ability to express this understanding. A comprehension is not about you or your feelings; it is about the writer's opinion and whether you grasp it.

 This is why you should always refer to the text in all your answers.

 When answering comprehension questions, it is a good idea to break up the question so that you are sure to understand what the question requires of you. Answer each part of the question and, of course, it is always a good idea to take the mark allocation into account.

Read the text below and answer the questions that follow.

The Seven Secrets of Dysfunctional Families

Happily, practicing these seven principles will transform your perfectly functioning family into a completely dysfunctional one. by Sol Herzig, Ph.D.

It's no secret that the number of happy families is at an all-time low. Most communities scarcely boast a handful, and the trend is accelerating. In fact, social scientists predict that by the year 2018 only 411 reasonably happy families will be left in the entire United States! The good news is, no longer must you watch this sweeping revolution from the side-lines. By studying and applying the seven principles below, your family too can come out of the shadows and proudly join the dysfunctional majority.

a. PROBLEMS REQUIRE BLAME

In the normal course of events, problems are not supposed to happen. If they do, someone must be blamed. Fortunately, there's no shortage of inept, spiteful, deranged suspects to choose from. If someone neglects to tighten the pickle jar lid, they must be hunted down and interrogated. Not enough hot water left for your shower? It's a sure sign of treachery that you ignore at your peril. Is a child underachieving in school? Somewhere in the picture there's an arrogant, incompetent teacher in bad need of a tongue lashing. Sensitize those around you to the fact that your slightest irritation is their worst nightmare. Expect perfection from everyone but yourself, and don't settle for anything less. Everything in life has to be earned, but most especially unconditional love.

b. SHAME ON YOU

Encouraging family members to gratify your every whim is a responsibility you need to take seriously. The best way to ensure this is through the liberal use of guilt and shame. Thankfully, there are many ways to go about this. An oft overlooked, yet surprisingly effective, method is the judicious assignment of pet names. In a society where a stable sense of identity is elusive for so many, pet names can play a very constructive role.

Examples of identity-building names include "Selfish Brat", "Space Cadet", "Prima Donna", "Kvetch", "Clueless", "Klutzhead", and so on.

c. YOU ARE ALWAYS TEACHING

Without being aware of it, we are constantly teaching our children as they observe our behavior. This provides unique opportunities for imparting wisdom. Fortunate is the child who chances upon his parent, newspaper in hand, sprawled out on the sofa wolfing down jellybeans. Is there a more powerful way of demonstrating that multi-tasking doesn't have to be hard or boring? Or better yet, picture your child coming home from school and trying to engage you in conversation. By keeping your eyes glued to the computer screen, you are teaching the importance of maintaining focus under all circumstances. Repeated glances at your wristwatch will convey the critical importance of time. The vital role sleep plays in our lives can be demonstrated by several random, colossal yawns. All this teaching in just one brief encounter! Being observed by our children is a great responsibility, but also a wonderful opportunity.

d. SAY IT LOUD, "I HOLLER AND I'M PROUD"

Everyone knows that communication is indispensable to family functioning. The key element in communication is simply being heard. Nothing ensures this better than screaming at the top of your lungs. Finally, there is no bolder exclamation point to an extended scream than hurtling the object nearest to you against the wall. If it shatters into many little pieces, you can rest assured that you've done everything humanly possible to get your point across.

e. KEEP THEM GUESSING

Broadmindedness requires inconsistency. Yet the advantages of inconsistency extend much farther. How better to prepare children for life's uncertainty than by subjecting them to it from their earliest years. Say your daughter fails to finish her soup. One day, you can choose to ignore it. The next, you pour it over her head. The important thing is to always keep them guessing. This will take effort on your part, but it will be rewarded by the look of utter confusion on your children's faces.

f. BOUNDARIES, SHMOUNDARIES

Boundaries are for countries, not families. Can you imagine anything more sterile and stifling than a family committed to personal space, privacy, and parental authority? Where are the caring, sharing, and togetherness we all cherish? Think instead of the relaxed informality that would pervade your home if everyone was on a first name basis and shared equal authority. True, it would take a while getting accustomed to your children calling you Phil and setting your bedtime, but once you got rid of your authoritarian mind set, you'd actually find it both endearing and liberating . Eradicate boundaries and you'll very soon be putting the "fun" back into dysfunctional, where it belongs!

g. YOUR MARRIED CHILDREN NEED YOU NOW MORE THAN EVER

Married children yearn for your active involvement in their lives, but are often too shy to even hint at it. A wise parent will not make them beg, but will take on the role as a given.

It is important to understand the following when reading any piece of writing:

· Audience

o This means for whom the piece of writing was intended. Who is supposed to be reading this?

· Intention

o What was the writer's intention in writing this? What purpose did s/he want to achieve? o Does the writer want to inform/ entertain/ persuade? Or even all three?

4.1. Identify and correct the spelling error in the subheading. Explain your reasoning. (2)

4.2. Discuss the tone of the opening paragraph. (2)

4.3. Explain the function of the use of the hyphen in the opening paragraph. (1)

4.4. Comment on the inclusion of the writer of the article's credentials at the end of the subtitle. (2)

4.5. "If someone neglects to tighten the pickle jar lid, they must be hunted down and interrogated." Explain why this sentence is an example of hyperbole. (2)

4.6. "Everything in life has to be earned, but most especially unconditional love." Argue whether this sentence contains a paradox or not. (3)

4.7. Choose one of the pet names given as examples in the "Shame on you" paragraph and describe the kind of behaviour that might warrant such an epithet. (2)

4.8. Which spelling in the "You are always teaching" paragraph alerts the reader that this article is from an American publication? (1)

4.9. What is the parent in the "You are always teaching" paragraph really signalling to her/his child? (3)

4.10. Comment on the change of register between "holler" and "indispensable" in the "Say it loud" paragraph. Explain how this achieves the writer's intention in writing this article. (3)

4.11. Correct the punctuation error in the "Keep them guessing" paragraph. (1)

4.12. Do you think calling your father Phil and deciding his bedtime is an example of "shared authority"? Explain your answer. (2)

4.13. Identify the figure of speech in "putting the fun back in dysfunctional". (1)

Total: [25]

4. Discussion

TOPIC FOR DISCUSSION:

We expect certain people, based on their title and role in our lives, to always know how to love us well. But that's not usually the case. Those closest to us often hurt us the most. And if you choose, as I have, not to walk away from those relationships, you have to draw strong boundaries. http://www.huffingtonpost.com/steve-austin/dealing-with-dysfunctiona_b_10792818.html

Your rubric out of 10 marks:

Level	Ability to sustain discussion	Focus on main point of discussion	Arrangement and articulation of ideas	Response to questions
Level 6-7: Very good – excellent (2.5 marks) Level 5-6: Satisfactory – good (2 marks) Level 4: Adequate (1.5 marks) Level 1-3: Very weak – poor (0 – 1 mark)	There is an ability to listen attentively and sensitively to others' points and then respond appropriately without dominating the discussion.	There is an ability to focus clearly on a main point and to make such a point concisely.	There is an ability to arrange ideas clearly and to articulate them communicate effectively using a good vocabulary. and	There is an ability to answer questions and not talk vaguely around a topic. Where the learner has no answer to a question, there is an ability to acknowledge this and redirect the discussion.

Source: National Senior Certificate Handbook (IEB) 2014

Anagram break: Which famous singer is hiding in this phrase?

'Sweaty Ken'

5. Writing a summary

- Just like the comprehension test, the summary section of the exam checks your understanding of a text, as well as your ability to express this understanding. Once again, it does not test your personal knowledge of a subject – it tests your understanding of what someone else has written.
- The summary tests ability to extract relevant information for a specific purpose. The instructions in the examination will guide you to the purpose of your summary.
- Here are some pointers for writing a summary:

- Read the instructions and make sure you understand what is required of you.
- Read the passage until you understand it.
- Sum it up in one sentence or give it a title: this will help you to pinpoint the main idea and focus on the details important to the purpose of your summary.
- Highlight only the main points or details that pertain to the purpose of the summary.
- Once you have done this, put the original text to the side. On your rough paper, write down in point form the points you remember having highlighted. This will help you use your own words and not fall into the trap of trying to rewrite sentences while thinking up a synonym for each word – this is both stupid and time-consuming.

- NO figurative language, quotes and unnecessary examples, anecdotes, statistics, rhetorical questions. Nothing should be said more than once. Rewrite direct speech in indirect speech.
- Return to the original highlighted text and check whether you have missed anything.
- Write a rough draft. Check to see that the information in your rough draft is relevant to the purpose of your summary.
- Check that you have not repeated yourself in any way.
- Check that you have used only information from the passage.

- Now count the words. If you have too few, make sure that you have included all relevant information. If you have too many: shorten phrases to single words if possible and use strong verbs.

Use conjunctions to join sentences and smooth the flow of your writing. Fluency is key

- Edit your work – check for spelling, punctuation and sentence construction.
- Include a title if you have been asked to do so.

- Write out the summary neatly.
- Write out the word count. (Unless instructed otherwise, the title is included in the word count.)

Let's practise condensing sentences (with credit to Macrat)

1.The story was no such that it could be believed.
This sentence is not incorrect but it can be improved. How? By shortening it to:

_____

2. She was a person too apt to believe what she heard. This sentence becomes she was a gullible person

3. The difficulty was one which could not be surmounted.

Exercise 1:

1. Divide the cake into two equal halves.
2. The lieutenant received a fatal wound which caused his death.
3. The man under the table was unmistakably suffering from an overindulgence in intoxicating liquor. (challenge: 4 words)

Exercise 2: Working in pairs condense these sentences:

1. When we got there we found that we had arrived in the middle of her blowdrying and curling her hair.
2. She drove like a terrible maniac, weaving in and out of cars, hooting at dogs, and killing a few chickens as she went. (3 words)
3. The sun rose in a land of high crags and steep gulleys illuminating every cranny with liquid shimmering gold.
4. She muttered to him, her words barely audible: "Go away, go away. Leave me alone, and stop pestering me all the time with constant question."
5. The victim of this attack believes, if we may repeat that assertion that he has several times given word to, that he can identify his attackers.
6. The freshly ploughed lines seemed to stretch from the East to the West like channellings in a piece of new corduroy.

Read the next passage and follow the instructions that follow in order to summarise it:

· You are to present a paper to your school entitled Debunking the myths and stereotypes of African (un)civilisation. In other words, your speech will be proving that, contrary to popular belief, Africa did have advanced civilisations before it was colonised.

· Select the relevant information from the text and summarise this in 100 words to reflect the purpose of your speech.

· You must write in full sentences. You will be marked on your content as well as on your grammar.

· Include the title in your summary but do not include the title in your word count.

· Write down your (accurate) word count.

[10]

Ethiopia in the Middle Ages

By 1500 Ethiopia was at its peak. It was a rich, powerful, literate, and in many ways democratic Christian culture. Haberland wrote: "Internally, the empire enjoyed the utmost tranquility at that time." Francesco Alvares, writing from 1520-26, observed that, "Order and security reigned."

Ethiopian monks taught art, science, and other subjects. The Kebra Nagast tells how the Queen of Sheba went to Jerusalem to learn the wisdom of Solomon. They had a son, Menelik, who became the first Ethiopian king and brought the Ark of the Covenant to Ethiopia. The Kebra Nagast portrays the Ethiopians as God's chosen people, supplanting the Jews who did not convert to Christianity.

Government

Ethiopia's government in the middle ages was mostly democratic. The king was above the democratic process, but below him were district elections of the “great man”, who could be voted out of office or demoted to a lower government position with an assembly of the people in his district.

History of Ethiopia

During Ethiopia's isolation period, beginning in the 11th century, Connah wrote that the Ethiopians developed "some of the most remarkable ecclesiastical architecture in the world." Between the 10th and 16th centuries churches carved from rocks became commonplace. In the 12th century for instance Ethiopia's King Lalibela oversaw the construction of 10 chapels and churches carved out of mountains near the capital of Roha.

In the 15th century, when the Portuguese travelled to Ethiopia, they were surprised to find a kingdom much like their own. "Ethiopia," Haberland writes, "was closely linked with distant lands as far away as Europe, not only economically but also culturally."

"When in the 1520s Europeans reached the Ethiopian highlands," Davidson wrote, "they found and described a civilization at about the same level as their own."

The initial relationship between Ethiopia and Portugal was very good. The Portuguese even sent a military expedition to Ethiopia, under the guidance of Vasco Da Gama's son, to help fight off the northern Muslims. Unfortunately the Portuguese, loyal to the Church in Italy, and the Ethiopians, loyal to a much different Coptic Church in Egypt, became annoyed with the other's stubbornness to change, and the ties between the two Christian powers soon broke.

Your rubric out of 10 marks: Adapted from IEB rubric

Very good	8-10	A holistic picture of how different parts of the text have been chosen to position the reader. Register is appropriate and convincing. Expression is flawless. Masterful reasoning ability.
Good	6.5-7.5	Ability to discern which aspects of the text are being used to position the reader. Own words. Expression has an element of flair not evident in the average summary. Consistently appropriate register. Largely convincing.
Average	5-6	Ability to discern which aspects of the text are relevant. Own words. Register is mostly appropriate. Expression is merely competent.
Below average	3.5-4.5	Ability – some of the time – to discern which parts of the texts are relevant. Own words not always effective. Register is not consistently appropriate. Expression is likely to be severely flawed, but does not impede understanding.
Very weak	0-3	Extremely limited – if any – understanding of the text. Inability to select appropriate parts of the text to summarise. Register is not appropriate. Expression is likely to be poor, impeding understanding.
Penalties	-1 - -2	Full and coherent sentences are not used. Excessive copying. More than 100 words. No word count provided. Inexcusably inaccurate word count provided.

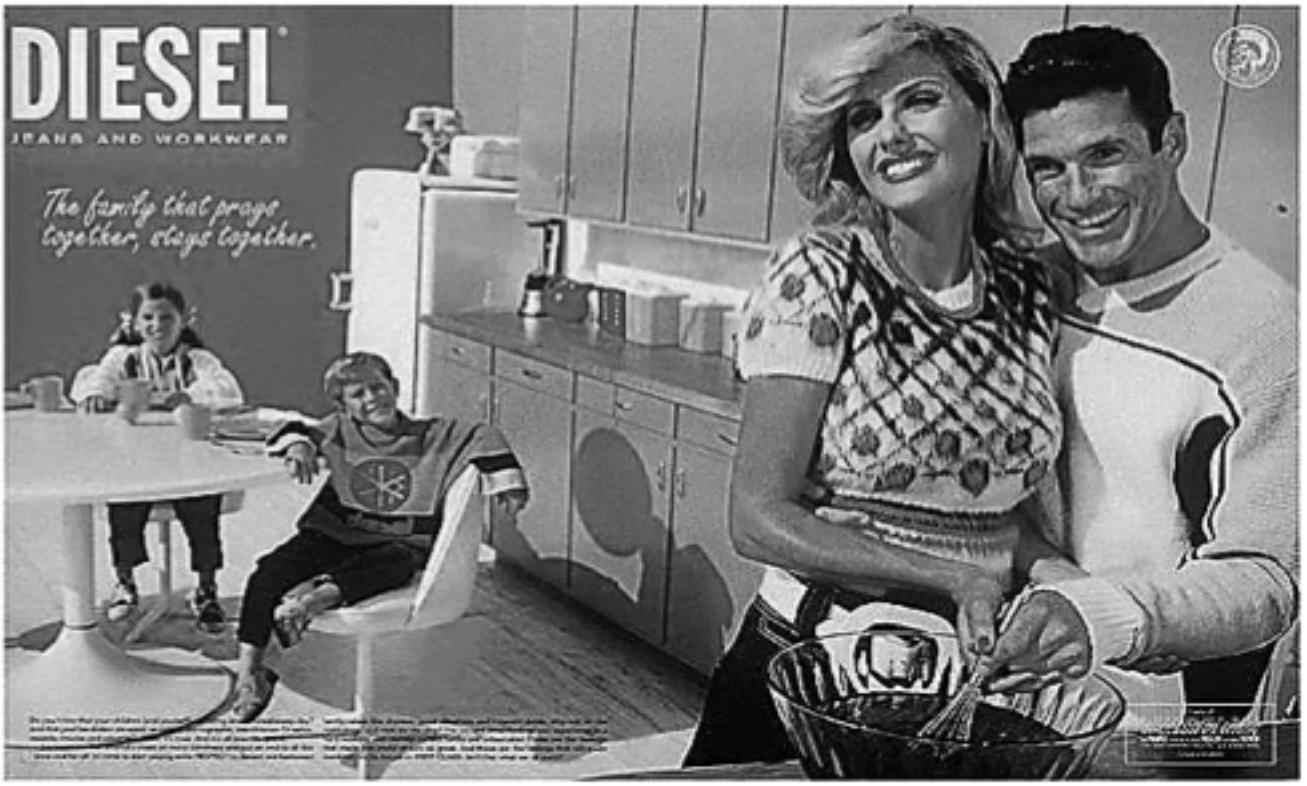

Anagram break: Which shamed sportsman is hiding in this phrase?

'Long arm nectar'

6. Visual Literacy Why should you be visually literate?

It has often been emphasised that we live in a visual world and that you belong to a visual generation. Your world is filled with images. These images create a certain reality. You need to be a critical viewer of these images so that you can decide on your own version of which reality you prefer. Be aware of your world. It's that simple.

VISUAL 1

This is an advertisement for Diesel Jeans and Work-wear. The caption reads:

“The family that prays together stays together.”

6.1. Name one family value that this advertisement promotes; then refer to one visual and one typewritten aspect to substantiate your answer. (2)

6.2. Do you feel that this advertisement is serious about the family values it promotes? Explain your answer with reference to the image and the text. (2)

VISUAL 2

This is also an advertisement for Diesel Jeans and Work-wear. The caption reads:

“A Diesel T-shirt is just what I always wanted!”

6.3. Refer to your answer for question 1. Name one way in which this advertisement is similar to the one in Visual 1. You must refer to both advertisements to substantiate your answer. (3)

6.4. Refer again to your answer for question 1. Name one way in which this advertisement is different to the Visual 1. You must refer to both advertisements to substantiate your answer. (3)

6.5. How does the inclusion of the white butler in the background serve to reinforce the advertisement's message? (1)

VISUAL 3:

6.6. Discuss how this visual reinforces the advertisement's message in Visual 2. (2)

6.7. Identify in grammatical terms why the caption "One big (straight, gay, multi-cultural, traditional) family." is not a correct sentence. (1)

6.8. Explain the function of the brackets in the caption with reference to the meaning of the sentence. (2)

7. Language: Punctuation and other bits

Read the text and then answer the questions that follow:

SOUTH AFRICAN MUSIC: FROM BUBBLEGUM TO KWAITO

1 While white rockers expressed their angst to largely white audiences during the 1980s, South Africa's black townships were held in thrall by what came to be called "bubblegum" – bright, light dance pop influenced by American disco as much as by the heritage of mbaqanga.

2 Forebears of this style were groups such as The Soul Brothers, who had massive hits with their soulful pop, while artists such as Brenda Fassie, Chicco Twala and Yvonne Chaka Chaka drew huge audiences with their brand of township dance music.

3 Up until her death in 2004, Fassie was perhaps the most controversial and the best-known figure in South African township pop, having had a huge hit in 1985 with "Weekend Special" before embarking on a decade of high living that would have put the Rolling Stones to shame.

4 Ever outspoken, Fassie admitted to drug addiction, marriage problems and more, yet her keen following never quite deserted her, and in 1997 she made a significant comeback with her album "Memeza" (meaning "Shout").

5 Fassie continued to stir controversy with diva behaviour and a turbulent private life, and remained a central figure in the development of South African township pop as her music – made in conjunction with a variety of leading producers – moved from the "bubblegum" of the 1980s to the edges of the dominant kwaito style of the late 1990s. Her albums sold in huge amounts, and she toured the African continent. Fassie was a consummate survivor, and the outrageous template for musical superstardom township-style.

6 In the 1990s, the hearts of every young black South African was grabbed by a new style of township music. That music was kwaito, probably now the biggest force in the South African music scene.

7 Just as township "bubblegum" had drawn on American disco, so kwaito put an African spin on the international dance music of the 1990s, a genre losely referred to as house music.

8 As house, in its many forms, swept the globe, so young South African music-makers gave it a homemade twist: the beat is paramount, the instrumentation usually minimal, and the lyrics more chanted than sung, with echoes of hip-hop and rap.

9 Stars with names as minimal as their music – Mdu, Mandoza, Arthur, Chiskop and Zola, for instance – rose to prominence. Groups such as Bongo Muffin, Abashante, Boom Shaka and TKZee developed huge followings, propelled by a street-wise visual style, an in-your-face performance energy and a host of pop videos.

10 Today, South Africa's kwaito stars are the commercial centrepiece of an ever-growing music industry that is too diverse to be contained in one overview.

11 Who knows when the next big authentically South African movement will hit us next? Read more: http://www.southafrica.info/about/arts/922575.htm#ixzz2DayNxCvx

Paragraph 1

7.1 Explain why there should not be an apostrophe in "1980s".

1. Apostrophes are used to indicate possession.
2. Apostrophes are used to indicate contraction.
3. Apostrophes are used to indicate omission.
4. Apostrophes are not used to create plural nouns – EVER.
5. All of the above

7.2 Explain why there should be an apostrophe in “South Africa’s”.

1. Apostrophes are used to indicate possession.
2. Apostrophes are used to indicate contraction.
3. Apostrophes are used to indicate omission.
4. Apostrophes are not used to create plural nouns – EVER.

7.3 Explain why “bubblegum” is in inverted commas.

1. Inverted commas are used to indicate a direct quotation.
2. Inverted commas are used to indicate direct speech.
3. Inverted commas are used to indicate a literary title or name.
4. Inverted commas are used to indicate sarcasm or irony in the use of a word.
5. Inverted commas are used to indicate a word that is not officially recognised.
6. Inverted commas are used to indicate emphasis – NEVER!

7.4 Explain why mbaqanga is in italics.

1. Italics are used to indicate emphasis or contrast.
2. Italics are used to indicate titles of texts.
3. Italics are used to indicate words in a different language.
4. Italics are used to indicate that one is discussing a particular word.

Paragraph 2

7.5 Explain the use of the commas in the first part of this sentence.

1. Commas are used to separate the items in a list or series.
2. Commas may be used before a conjunction to separate clauses.
3. Commas are used to set off introductory elements.
4. Commas may be used as parenthesis.
5. Commas are used to separate adjectives in a list.
6. Commas are used to set off direct speech.

7.6 Explain the use of the commas in the last part of this sentence.

1. Commas are used to separate the items in a list or series.
2. Commas may be used before a conjunction to separate clauses.
3. Commas are used to set off introductory elements.
4. Commas may be used as parenthesis.
5. Commas are used to separate adjectives in a list.
6. Commas are used to set off direct speech.

Paragraph 3

7.7 Why is Brenda Fassie referred to as “Fassie”?

1. The writer is showing disapproval by not including her first name.
2. The writer is lazy.
3. It is common practice to refer to famous people under discussion by their surnames.

7.8 Explain the hyphen in “best-known”.

1. Hyphens are used to create compound words.
2. Hyphens are used to join prefixes to other words if the prefix ends in a vowel and the word begins with a vowel.
3. Hyphens are used to join the prefixes “pre” and “post” to existing words.
4. Hyphens are used to divide a word at the end of a line of writing.

Paragraph 4

7.9 Provide an adjective for a person who suffers from “drug addiction, marriage problems and more”.

7.10 Provide one word for the phrase “keen following”.

Paragraph 5

7.11 Explain the use of the dashes in paragraph 5.

1. Dashes are used to set off a short summary after a complete main clause.
2. Dashes are used to separate additional, but not essential, information that interrupts a sentence.
3. Dashes are used to emphasise parenthesis.

7.12 Explain the use of the hyphen in “township-style”.

1. Hyphens are used to create compound words.
2. Hyphens are used to join prefixes to other words if the prefix ends in a vowel and the word begins with a vowel.
3. Hyphens are used to join the prefixes “pre” and “post” to existing words.
4. Hyphens are used to divide a word at the end of a line of writing.

7.13 Do you agree with the use of the commas before “and” in this paragraph? Explain your answer.

7.14 Why is it wrong to say “huge amounts” in this paragraph?

Paragraph 6
7.15 Identify and correct the error of concord in this paragraph.

Paragraph 7
7.16 Identify and correct the spelling error in this paragraph.

Paragraph 8

7.17 Explain the use of the colon in this paragraph.

1. The colon introduces a list.
2. The colon introduces a series of ideas.
3. The colon introduces a quotation or statement.
4. The colon is used between two clauses when the second clause explains the first.
5. The colon is used between the title and subtitle of a book.

7.18 Do you think “house” and “kwaito” should be capitalised? Explain your answer.

Paragraph 9

7.19 Explain the use of the dashes in this paragraph.

1. Dashes are used to set off a short summary after a complete main clause.
2. Dashes are used to separate additional, but not essential, information that interrupts a sentence.
3. Dashes are used to emphasise parenthesis.

7.20 Explain the use of the hyphen in this paragraph.

A. Hyphens are used to create compound words.

2. Hyphens are used to join prefixes to other words if the prefix ends in a vowel and the word begins with a vowel.
3. Hyphens are used to join the prefixes “pre” and “post” to existing words.
4. Hyphens are used to divide a word at the end of a line of writing.

Pronouns: Interrogative and Relative

Interrogative pronouns are used to ask questions while relative pronouns act as subordinate conjunctions.

7.21. Refer to the underlined pronouns in paragraphs 2, 10, and 11 and say whether they are interrogative or relative pronouns.

Anagram break: Which notorious politician is hiding in this phrase?

‘Heil, old fart!’

8. Transactional writing: Letter of application

 The purpose of the letter of application or cover letter is to introduce yourself to an organisation, demonstrate your interest in the company or a specific vacancy, draw attention to your curriculum vitae and motivate the reader to interview you. Often this letter is the first contact you have with a prospective employer.

 The tone of the letter will be dictated by the position you are seeking. The rule is that the more authority the position has then the more formal the cover letter should be and the more specific. You want the letter to be brief but complete. It's important to highlight your skills in relation to the specific job being offered and to explain why you are perfectly suited to the position. (http://exclusive-executive- resumes.com/cover-letters/cover-letter-tone-formal-friendly/)

 Characteristics:

- An application letter, often called a cover letter, is your opportunity to create a good first impression on a potential employer. Think of the summary on a book cover that compels you to purchase the book. Employers use application letters in a similar way. The documents are tools to gauge which applicants are worthy of serious consideration.

- Introduction: An effective application letter should tell the reader that you want a particular job and explain your interest in that position. You should also explain why you're seeking to work at a specific company. Use this as an opportunity to display your knowledge about the company you're applying to. Doing so creates the impression that you're making thoughtful decisions instead of just applying for any open positions.

- Body: Outline how your knowledge, skills and experience are relevant to the position you're applying for and put that in the application letter.

- Give contact details: Your application letter should encourage possible employers to contact you with any possible questions. Indicate that you are expecting an interview.

- Professional presentation: An effective application letter communicates professionalism in its presentation. It should be free of grammatical and spelling errors, and you should stick to professional fonts and formatting.

Research your dream job or an ideal job for the holidays to make some extra pocket money. Write a letter of application that you would submit with your CV. (You do not have to hand in a CV.) Include a reference to the vacancy you found.

Your rubric out of 20 marks: adapted from the IEB rubric

CONTENT	MARK	STRUCTURE	MARK	LANGUAGE	MARK
Original and coherent. Style is clear, mature and personal. Intelligent and insightful.	6–7	Format is correct. Writing follows structure that is logical and coherent.	5–6	Sophisticated vocabulary and diction. Language conventions correct (minimal spelling/ punctuation errors). Register skilfully adapted to audience and context.	6–7
Original. Clear, mature and personal. Depth not always sustained but thorough engagement with question.	5 - 5.5	Format mostly correct. Structure is mostly logical and coherent.	4.5	Competent, at times impressive, use of language conventions. Minor flaws in register/ awareness of audience and context.	5 - 5.5
Some degree of originality but some areas jar with the question's requirements. Limited personal voice. Average.	4.5	Format mostly correct. Structure recognisable. Pedestrian, but not seriously flawed.	3.5 – 4	Mostly accurate use of language conventions. Sound understanding of register, audience and context. Some spelling and grammar errors but do not interfere with meaning.	4.5
Some originality, but mostly clichéd.	3.5 – 4	Errors in format. Structure awkward.	3	Flawed use of language conventions. Errors affect meaning. Limited understanding of register, audience and context.	3.5 – 4
Hackneyed/ clichéd. Very little thought has gone into meaning of content and question.	3	Vague sense of format and structure.	2.5	Poor spelling and grammar. Errors interfere with meaning. Register at odds with demands of task.	3
Poor response. Demands of task misunderstood.	0 – 2.5	Some attempt at format. Jumbled.	0 -2	Nonsensical at times.

© Can Stock Photo

Anagram break: Which famous artist is hiding in this phrase?

'Did color in a nave'

9. Poetry
Narrative, post-colonial poetry – childhood

Read the poem below and answer the questions that follow.

Circumcision Taufiq Rafat

Taufiq Rafat developed the narrative poem in Pakistani English poetry, changing everyday incidents and events into metaphors and stories. He wrote about life in Pakistan as he experienced it but turned it into poetry that transcended culture. Some of his best poems were written around 1974, including 'The Boy with the Bashed-in Skull' and his classic 'Wedding in the Flood'. He died on 2 August 1998 of cardiac arrest. He remains a towering presence in Pakistani English poetry. 'Circumcision' is one of his earlier works.

Having hauled down my pyjamas they dragged me, all legs and teeth, that fateful afternoon, to a stool before which the barber hunkered with an open cut-throat. He stropped it on his palm with obvious relish.
I did not like his musthachios, nor his conciliatory smile. Somehow.
they made me sit, and two cousins held a leg apiece. The barber looked at me; I stared right back, defying him to start something.
He just turned aside to whisper to my cousin who suddenly cried
'Oh look at that golden bird,' and being only six I looked up;
which was all the time he needed to separate me from my prepuce.
'Bastard, sonofapig,' I roared,
'sister-ravisher, you pimp and catamite,' while he applied salve and bandaged the organ.
Beside myself with indignation and pain, I forgot the presence of elders, and cursed and cursed in the graphic vocabulary of the lanes, acquired at leap-frog, marbles, and blindman's buff.
Still frothing at the mouth they fetched me to bed, where an anxious mother kissed and consoled me. It was not till I was alone that I dared to look down at my naked middle.

When I saw it so foreshortened, raw, and swathed in lint, I burst into fresh tears. Dismally
I wondered if I would ever be able to pee again.
This
was many many years ago.
I have since learnt it was more than a ritual, for by the act of a pull and downward slash, they prepare us for the disappointments at the absence of golden birds life will ask us to look at between our circumcision and death.
-Taufiq Rafat

9.1 Discuss how the diction in lines 1 – 5 serve to set up a specific mood. [Quote the words that stand out for you and discuss their connotations.] (3)

9.2 How does the poet construct a melodramatic or absurd picture of the barber (lines 4 – 7)? [Show in your answer that you understand the meaning of the underlined words.] (2)

9.3 Discuss the speaker's physical and verbal reactions to the barber (lines 11 – 12 and lines 19 – 21), providing a brief character sketch of the speaker. (3)

9.4 The speaker's childhood games and environment are described in lines 26 – 28. Discuss the paradox of this environment. (3)

9.6 How is this paradox continued in the speaker's diction? (2)

9.6 Discuss the different relationships between the speaker and the older people in his life by referring specifically to his cousin and his mother. How is power shown to be affected by age and gender? Refer to the poem as a whole in your discussion. (4)

9.7 Give a reason for the separation of the two stanzas. (1)

9.8 What effect is achieved by the indent before "This" (line 39). (1)

9.9 How do the two stanzas differ in tone and style? Quote to substantiate your answer. (4)

9.10 Discuss the metaphor of the golden bird in the poem. Refer to the poem as a whole in your answer. (4)

[27]

Anagram break: Which famous nurse is hiding in this phrase?

‘Angel of the reclining’

South African Poetry:

Chris van Wyk: Author of Shirley, Goodness and Mercy

Read through the poem below and answer the questions that follow

I Have my Father’s Voice Chris van Wyk (1957-2014)

When I walk into a room where my father has just been I fill the same spaces he did from the elbows on the table to the head thrown back and when we laugh
we aim the guffaw
at the same space in the air.
Before anybody has told me this I know because I see myself through my father’s eyes.

When I was a pigeon-toed boy
my father used his voice to send me to bed
to run and buy the newspaper to scribble my way through matric.

He also used his voice for harsher things:
to bluster when we made a noise
when the kitchen wasn’t cleaned after supper when I was out too late.
Late for work, on many mornings, one sock in hands, its twin an angry glint in his eye he flings dirty clothes out of the washing box:
vests, jeans, pants and shirts shouting anagrams of fee fo fi fum until he is up to his knees in a stinking heap of laundry.

I have my father’s voice too and his fuming temper and I shout as he does.

But I spew the words out in pairs of alliteration and an air of assonance.
Everything a poet needs my father has bequeathed me except the words.

9.11. What is the poet's intention in this poem? (2)

9.12. Explain the effect of the poet using the first person in this poem. (2)

9.13. Identify the figure of speech used in the title of the poem and comment on its effectiveness. (2)

9.14. What does the phrase "before anyone has told me this I know" (line 8) tell us about the poet. (2)

9.15. Find one example of alliteration from the poem and comment on its effectiveness. (2)

9.16. By referring closely to the diction, describe van Wyk's father's personality. (4)

9.17. Compare and contrast the poet's voice and that of his father, substantiate your answer with close reference to the poem. (4)

9.18. Explain the paradox in the final line of this poem. (3)

9.19. Explain the function of the colon in lines 16 and 23. (1)

[22]

Module B: That old St Valentine …

Love is:

 My heart is, and always will be, yours. (Sense and Sensibility)

 Hearts will never be practical until they are made unbreakable. (The Wizard of Oz)

 Only time can heal your broken heart, just as only time can heal his broken arms and legs. (Miss Piggy)

 Love is of all passions the strongest, for it attacks simultaneously the head, the heart and the senses. (Lao Tzu)

 Love is composed of a single soul inhabiting two bodies. (Aristotle)

1. Novel: A Thousand Splendid Suns

Are you enjoying the novel? Keep reading…

2. Listening comprehension

Effective listening ensures successful communication, as well as the correct processing of information. Ever heard people tell you that the key to good marks is paying attention in class ...?

Good listening enables you to:

- Identify the main idea
- Draw logical inferences
- Summarise important information

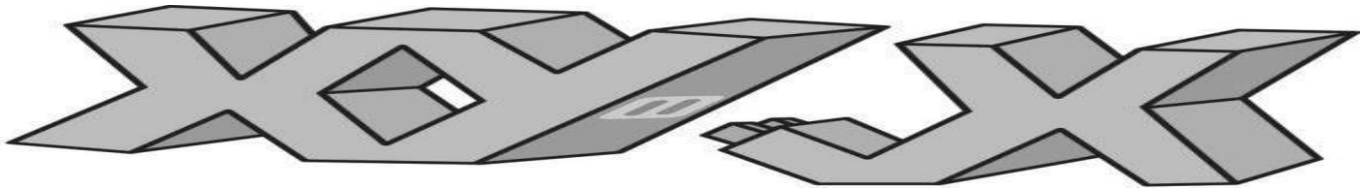

Anagram break: Which profession is hiding in this phrase? 'moon starer'

4 . Reading for comprehension

The New York Times

Peeking Inside the Mind of the Boy Dating Your Daughter

By TARA PARKER-POPE Published: February 24, 2008

1 THE image of the testosterone-fuelled teenage boy is a familiar one. It has been reinforced by movies such as "Porky's," "American Pie" and "Superbad," which chronicle the escapades of high school boys.

2 But are boys that age really defined primarily by their sexual urges? Or does the stereotype fall short, telling us less about teenage males and more about a culture that seems to have consistently low expectations of its boys?

3 A new report in The Journal of Adolescence this month suggests that when it comes to sex, girls and dating, boys are more complex than we typically give them credit for. While hormonal urges are no doubt an important part of a teenage boy's life, they aren't necessarily the defining trait influencing a boy's relationships with girls.

4 Psychology researchers from the State University of New York at Oswego recently examined data collected from 105 10th-grade boys, average age 16, who answered questions about a number of health behaviours. In questions put to them about girls (most of the boys self-identified as heterosexual), the teenagers were asked to note their reasons for pursuing a relationship. The top answer, marked by 80 percent of the boys? "I really liked the person."

5 Physical attraction and wanting to get to know someone better were tied as the second-most-popular answers. Boys who were sexually active were as likely to say they pursued sex out of love as they were to say they simply wanted to know what sex feels like or to satisfy a physical desire. Wanting to lose their virginity barely registered, with just 14 percent of boys checking that answer.

6 Researchers said the findings show that teenage boys really are motivated by love and a desire for meaningful relationships.

7 But many people still don't buy it, including, it seems, many former teenage boys.

8 "Based on my past experience as a teenage boy, this study just reinforces my view that teenage boys are horny liars," wrote John, one of about 170 people who submitted comments about the study to The Times's Well blog last week.

9 "Yeah right! 16-year-old boys are concerned about relationships?" scoffed Brian, another reader, who said he has a daughter. "I can just about pinpoint the exact moment in my prepubescent life when the 'lies I told the ladies' turned into 'the 'truths' I told myself ... These punks have got one thing on their minds, and it ain't relationships."

10 Such scepticism about boys in their teens isn't surprising, say researchers, but it reveals more about what's going on in the minds of adults, than of teenagers.

11 "Grown men often deny how dependent they are on women," said Michael G. Thompson, a psychologist specializing in children and families and co-author of the book "Raising Cain: Protecting the Emotional Life of Boys." "The idea that you could pine for a girl, and be devastated by a girl makes an adult man uncomfortable. It reminds them of how profoundly attached they get to women."

12 None of this is to say that teen boys aren't interested in sex. Of course they are. But adolescence can often be a lonely time, and for many boys, girls represent needed companionship, Dr. Thompson said.

13 "Many boys are yearning to talk to somebody, but they can't talk to their boy friends because it's all teasing and a lot of competitiveness," he said. "For many boys who have been a little bit lonely in the boy group, finally meeting a girl and talking to her is a huge relief."

14 But the widespread scepticism about teenage boys is worrisome, some psychologists say, because it may mean that boys ultimately will fulfil our low expectations of them.

15 "The stereotype reduces boys to one-dimensional beings who just want sex and nothing else," said Andrew Smiler, an assistant professor of psychology at SUNY-Oswego and author of the recent study. "But there are certainly other things boys want. They want to play baseball. They want good grades and to go to good colleges. But if we insist all boys want is sex, in any context, that's one dimensional, and it really limits boys and how we think of boys."

16 There are reasons that Dr Smiler believes the boys in his study were telling the truth. The overall survey asked about more than just relationships and took about 45 minutes to complete. The answers the boys gave relating to things like alcohol use and sexual activity were consistent with data collected from other national surveys. The similarity of the responses to those questions suggests that the boys were, in general, being truthful.

17 “This is only a surprise to women,” wrote Brad, another reader of the Well blog. “Any male knows that he was desperately in love at 15 in a way he never would be again.”

Language Flash Verbs: transitive verbs are verbs that are transferred onto an object, i.e. they are followed by words that answer the question ‘what?’ or ‘whom?’; while intransitive verbs are either not followed by nouns, or followed by words that answer the question ‘when?’, ‘where?’, ‘why?’, or ‘how?’.

4.1 Identify the underlined verbs in the passage as transitive or intransitive. (6)

4.2 At which audience is this article aimed? Give two reasons for your answer. (3)

4.3 Comment on the illustration that accompanies this article at the top of the page. (2)

4.4 What, can you deduce, is the image portrayed of boys in the films mentioned in paragraph 1? (2)

4.5 Who is the “we” to whom the author refers in paragraph 3? (1)

4.6 Explain the reason for the inverted commas in paragraph 4. (1)

4.7 State the author’s reason for beginning a sentence with “But” in paragraph 7. (1)

4.8 What is the effect of referring to men as “former teenage boys” in paragraph 7? (2)

4.9 Describe the attitude, suggested by the word “scoffed” in paragraph 9 that the reader called Brian has towards teenage boys? (2)

4.10 Quote the question in paragraph 2 that is answered by paragraph 10. (1)

4.11 Explain Dr Michael Thompson’s reason (paragraph 11) for the way teenage boys are viewed, especially by adult men, in your own words. (3)

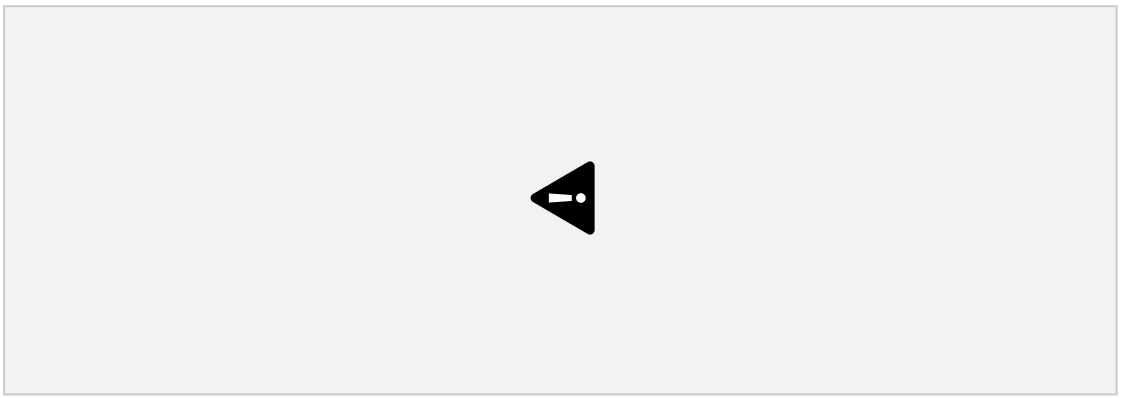

4.12 Give an example, suggested by the passage, of how “boys ultimately could fulfil our low expectations of them”? (3)

4.13 Do you believe these teenage boys? Give a reason, with examples, from your own personal experience. (3)

[30]

Anagram break: Which famous landmark is hiding in this phrase?

5. Visual literacy

Answer the following questions on Cartoon one:

5.1 Look at frame 1. Discuss the techniques the cartoonist uses to indicate Granny Anderson is irritated and the children are being irritating. (2)

5.2 In frame 3 explain what Granny Anderson’s facial expression is indicating about her thoughts about what Thandi has said to her. (1)

5.3 What does the cartoonist wish to convey to the reader by Thandi saying that maybe she should choose her words more carefully. (1)

Cartoon 2

Answer the following questions on Cartoon two:

5.4 In Frame 1 what is the flowery font style suggesting about Mother Anderson’s “words of Wisdom”? (1)

5.5 In Frame 2 there is no dialogue. Therefore the visual material is important. What is the position Mother Anderson is sitting in supposed to imply about her? (1)

5.6 Explain the pun that the cartoonist is playing on Frame 3 and 4. (2)

5.7 Compare frames 1 and 2 with frame 4 and explain why Mother Anderson's reaction can be seen as ironic. (2) Total (10)

6. Language: Dictionary and thesaurus work

Look at the following dictionary entries and answer the questions that follow.

A.

romance ^{n}: /rə(ʊ)ˈmans, ˈrəʊmans/
1 [mass noun] a feeling of excitement and mystery associated with love: I had a thirst for romance; love, especially when sentimental or idealized: He asked her for a date and romance blossomed; [count noun] a love affair, especially one that is not very serious or long-lasting: a holiday romance; a book or film dealing with love in a sentimental or idealised way: light historical romances; a genre of fiction dealing with love in a sentimental or idealised way: wartime passion from the master of romance.

1 [mass noun] a quality or feeling of mystery, excitement, and remoteness from everyday life: the kromance of the sea.

2 a medieval tale dealing with a hero of chivalry, of the kind common in the Romance languages: the Arthurian romances.

3 a work of fiction depicting a setting and events remote from everyday life, especially one of a kind popular in the 16th and 17th centuries: Elizabethan pastoral romances.

4
[music] a short informal piece: the romance from The Gadfly became a popular favourite.

romance ^{v}: /rə(ʊ)ˈmans, ˈrəʊmans/
[with object]
1 dated try to gain the love of; court: the wealthy estate owner romanced her

2 informal seek the attention or custom of (someone), especially by the use of flattery: he is being romanced by the big boys in New York

[no object]
3 engage in a love affair: we started romancing
4 another term for romanticise: to a certain degree I am romancing the past.

[etym.] Middle English: from Romance, originally denoting a composition in the vernacular as opposed to works in Latin. Early use denoted vernacular verse on the theme of chivalry; the sense 'genre centred on romantic love' dates from the mid 17th century.

B.

DARTBOARD Round object measuring 13 in in diameter that is divided into areas ranging in value from one to 20 points; it is used as a target for dart throwing.

double ring Ring that surrounds a zone where the segment points are doubled.

outer bull Ring that surrounds a zone worth 25 points.

triple ring Ring that surrounds a zone where the segment points are tripled.

bull's-eye Centre ring that surrounds a zone worth 50 points (also called the double bull); it is set at about 5.5 ft above the floor.

segment score number Number of points a dartboard segment is worth.

C.

rom (read-only memory): [noun] type of computer storage; CD-ROM, PROM, ROM, programmable read-only memory, small memory roman: [adjective] concerning ancient culture; Attic, Augustan, Doric, Grecian, Greek, Hellenic, Homeric, Ionic, Latin, Roman, Virgilian, academic, belletristic, bookish, canonic, canonical, classic, classicistic, humanistic, scholastic romance [1]: [noun] adventure, flight of fancy; charm, colour, excitement, exoticness, fairy tale, fancy, fantasy, fascination, glamour, hazard, idealisation, idyll, mystery, nostalgia, risk, sentiment, venture romance [2]: [noun] affair; illicit sexual relationship; affaire, amour, carrying-on, extracurricular activity, fling, goings-on, hanky-panky, intimacy, intrigue, liaison, love, playing around, relationship, D.

AD	Anno Domini	In the year of our Lord	Used to show years after the birth of Jesus Christ – 1600 AD am	Ante Meridian	Before midday	Used for hours after midnight and before noon – 12 am to 12 pm
c. / ca.	Circa	Approximately	Used for approximate dates – ca 1500
CV	Curriculum Vitae	Course of Life	Used to name a document which summarises a person's education and professional experience
e.g.	Exempli Gratia	For example	Used to list examples, e.g. literature, language, and comprehension
etc.	Et cetera	And other things	Used to signify items on a list that are not mentioned but suggested
i.e.	Id est	In other words	Used to rephrase or explain
pm	Post Meridian	After midday
RIP	Requiescat in pace	Rest in peace	Used as an attachment to someone who has died vs	Versus (not verse)	Against	Used to signify two opponents
abbr.	Abbreviation	Adj.	Adjective
Adv.	Adverb	Obj.	Object
Pl.	Plural	Poss.	Possessive
ATM	Automated Teller Machine	DNA	Deoxyribonucleic Acid
DVD	Digital Versatile Disc	HIV	Human Immunodeficiency Virus
FAQ	Frequently Asked Questions	VIP	Very Important Person
AIDS	Acquired Immunodeficiency Virus	CERN	European Council for Nuclear Research
FIFA	Federation Internationale de Football Association	SARS	Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome

E.

Romance – radiance, reliance, reluctance, remembrance, repentance, repugnance, resemblance, resistance, resonance

F.

Bromance – describes the complicated love and affection shared by two straight males.

Steve: Ah, Dave!!! I can't believe you stole this first pressing of Aladdin Sane from your record store for me. We were just talking about this the other night.

Dave: No sweat, pal.

Steve: That is some full-on bromance. You're the man.

by fletchlives May 30, 2005

6.1. From which kind of dictionary has each entry been taken? Give a reason for your answer in each case.

6.2. Explain the full etymology of the word romance.

6.3. What part of speech is the word romance?

6.4. Give the adjective, verb and adverb forms of the word romance.

6.5. Can the word romance be used as a transitive verb? Explain.

6.6. What is the highest score one can throw on a dartboard?

6.7. Are Roman and Grecian true synonyms? Explain your answer in detail.

6.8. Which abbreviation are you likely to encounter in the LO class?

6.9. Which abbreviation are you likely to encounter in a hospital?

6.10. Explain the difference between an abbreviation, an initialism, and an acronym.

6.11. Write a five-line limerick using the words in extract E.

Anagram break: Which job is hiding in this phrase?

'A stew, Sir?'

7. Poetry

My father kept me from children who were rough: by Stephen Spender

Sir Stephen Harold Spender CBE (28 February 1909 – 16 July 1995) was an English poet, novelist and essayist whose work concentrated on themes of social injustice and the class struggle. He was appointed Poet Laureate Consultant in Poetry to the United States Library of Congress in 1965.

Read more at https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Stephen_Spender

My parents kept me from children who were rough and who threw words like stones and who wore torn clothes.
Their thighs showed through rags. They ran in the street
And climbed cliffs and stripped by the country streams.

I feared more than tigers their muscles like iron
And their jerking hands and their knees tight on my arms.
I feared the salt coarse pointing of those boys
Who copied my lisp behind me on the road.

They were lithe, they sprang out behind hedges
Like dogs to bark at our world. They threw mud
And I looked another way, pretending to smile,
I longed to forgive them, yet they never smiled.

7.1. From what socio-economic group do you think the children mentioned in line one belong? Substantiate your answer by quoting from the poem. (2)

7.2. Identify the figure of speech in line 2 and comment on its effectiveness. (3)

7.3. Identify the figure of speech in line 7 and a comment on its effectiveness. (3)

7.4. By referring closely to the diction, describe these children. (4)

7.5 How can the feelings of the poet towards these children be seen as conflicted? (2)

7.6 Do you feel that the poet's parents were correct in keeping him from these children? Provide motivation for your answer. (2)

[16]

Metaphysical poetry

Metaphysical (literally translated from the Greek as beyond the natural) poetry was written mostly in 17th century England. It is characterised by intellectual thought – not really about feelings, but about analysing feelings. Characteristics of metaphysical poetry include: complex thought, conceits, paradox, and rhythm that mimics direct speech. The poems are written with religious references, reflecting the age in which they were written.

In poetry, a conceit is a term for an elaborate and paradoxical, unusual or forced figure of speech, usually a metaphor or a simile. A conceit has to be clever and surprise and entertain the reader.

John Donne was born on January 22, 1572, in London, England. He is known as the founder of the Metaphysical Poets, a term created by Samuel Johnson, an eighteenth-century English essayist, poet, and philosopher. The loosely associated group also includes Andrew Marvell. The Metaphysical Poets are known for their ability to startle the reader and coax new perspective through paradoxical images, subtle argument, inventive syntax, and imagery from art, philosophy, and religion using an extended metaphor known as a conceit. Donne reached beyond the rational and hierarchical structures of the seventeenth century with his exacting and ingenious conceits, advancing the exploratory spirit of his time.

https://www.poets.org/poetsorg/poet/john-donne

Read the poem below and answer the questions that follow.

THE FLEA by John Donne

Marke but this flea, and marke in this,
How little that which thou deny'st me is;
Mee it suck'd first, and now sucks thee,
And in this flea our two bloods mingled bee;
Confesse it, this cannot be said
A sinne, or shame, or losse of maidenhead,
Yet this enjoyes before it wooe,
And pamper'd swells with one blood made of two;
And this, alas! is more than wee would do.
O stay, three lives in one flea spare,
Where we almost, yea, more than married are.

This flea is you and I, and this
Our marriage bed, and marriage temple is.
Though parents grudge, and you, we're met,
And cloister'd in these living walls of jet.
Though use make you apt to kill me,
Let not to that self-murder added be,
And sacrilege, three sins in killing three.

Cruel and sudden, hast thou since Purpled thy nail in blood of innocence?
Wherein could this flea guilty be,
Except in that drop which it suck'd from thee?
Yet thou triumph'st, and say'st that thou Find'st not thyself nor me the weaker now.
'Tis true; then learn how false fears be;

Just so much honour, when thou yield'st to me,
Will waste, as this flea's death took life from thee.

7.5. What is the conceit in this poem? Refer closely to the poem in your answer. (5)

7.6. Comment on the word “little” (line 2). (4)

7.7. Find the Biblical allusions in the poem and comment on them. (4)

7.8. What is the speaker’s view on sin? Refer closely to the poem in your answer. (3)

7.9. Comment on the rhythm of the poem. Quote to substantiate your answer. (2)

7.10. How does the speaker’s beloved show her disdain of his proposition? (3)

7.11. Would you be convinced by such an argument? Refer to the poem in your answer. (2)

[24]

Anagram break: Which famous deceased royal is hiding in this phrase?

‘End is a car spin’

8. Creative writing: Descriptive Essay

The purpose of descriptive writing is to “paint a picture” for the reader. By appealing to all the senses, the writer of a descriptive piece is able to create the same experience that the writer had undergone for the reader.

 Use strong, descriptive words. Be precise so that the correct image emerges.

 Figurative language, such as analogies, similes and metaphors, helps to create a reality for the reader.

Activity:

She walked into the party. Her eyes saw the crowded room. She sat on the nearby sofa and took out her lipstick. “Hello”, she said as she smiled at her neighbour.

8.1 Change the woman’s character by only changing the verbs.

a) make her confident

b) make her timid.

8.2 Senses play an important part when recreating a snapshot. Don’t only include visual details but also auditory (the click of the pen); tactile (the wind pounding against your body); olfactory (smell of fish and chips), gustatory details (sherbet fizzing on your tongue), kinaesthetic (leaf fluttering in the breeze).

a) Write 5 sentences that describe the school at break time.

Descriptive Essay (50 marks)

Write a descriptive essay of approximately 400 - 450 words in which you recreate an aspect of John Donne's poem. You may choose a word or an image that appeals to you and use that as your inspiration. Look at the rubric below to guide your writing.

THE RUBRIC

Category	Style, tone and expression	Diction and sensory details/ Use of figurative language	Structure and fluency	Grammar, spelling and punctuation
11.5 – 12.5	Evidence of exceptional ability. Consistent excellence. Mind at work. Able to control tone and subtle shifts in nuance exceptionally well.	Highly effective and natural choice of evocative imagery that appeals to the senses as well as highly effective usage of figurative language. Excellent vocabulary.	Strong planning and editing has resulted in a well-structured and fluent essay. Paragraphs link creatively. Lively sentence structure aids effectiveness of essay.	Precise language. No errors.
10 – 11	Striking impact. Content controlled throughout.	Effective and mostly natural choice of vivid and detailed imagery that reveals observation and knowledge. Excellent vocabulary.	Strong planning and editing has resulted in a well-structured and fluent essay. Paragraphs always link logically and at times creatively. Varied sentence structure aids effectiveness of essay.	Punctuation, spelling and grammar are mostly flawless and complement the style of essay.
9 – 9.5	Mature thought and style. Some insight. Writing may lack a little polish.	Much sensory detail and vivid imagery as well as effective use of figurative language to describe. Very good vocabulary.	Good planning has resulted in a well-structured and fluent essay. Paragraphs link logically. Varied sentence structure complements effectiveness of essay.	Very good use of spelling, grammar and punctuation.
7.5 – 8.5	Interesting. Convincing. Direct, fairly well-controlled. Not always disciplined.	Some sensory detail as well as figurative language,	Planning has resulted in a structured and fluent essay. Paragraphs are logically	Mostly good use of spelling, punctuation and grammar.

		although cliched at times. Good vocabulary.	ordered. Sentence structure mostly correct.
6.5 – 7	Sincere, but pedestrian. Lacking in maturity but adequate.	Little/ inefficient sensory detail. Choice of words bland and or forced. Vocabulary acceptable although lacking in maturity.	Ideas often not properly developed.	Errors in spelling, punctuation and grammar, but do not hinder reading/ meaning.
5–6	Limited, but still worthy of a pass. Dull and mediocre.	Little sensory detail as well as inappropriate/ no use of figurative language. Expression is often clumsy.	A sometimes muddled essay. Paragraphs are not always logically ordered. Rambling at times. Errors in sentence structure.	Poor spelling, punctuation and/or grammar compromises/ hinders meaning at times.
4 – 4.5	Unable to sustain topic. A lack of perception. Length is a problem.	Lacks perception. Flat and insipid. Poor expression. No extended vocabulary.	Meaning is negatively affected/ compromised by poor planning. Paragraphs are muddled or non- existent. Rambling. Many errors in sentence structure.	Poor spelling, punctuation and/or grammar compromises/ hinders meaning.
0 – 3.5	Far too short. Flat and insipid.	No description at all.	Meaning is severely compromised by poor planning.	Meaning is severely compromised by poor language mechanics.